Buildings for Cathedral.

The board of directors of the Episcopal Cathedral at St. Alban's have selected the collegiate Gothic style of architecture for the new buildings that will soon be erected. The first of these will be the choir building to be situated on a part of the cathedral close already selected. It will cost $100,000. The plans for the buildings, which are being formulated by the board of Bishop Satterlee, will be carried into effect by George E. Truesdell, the chairman of the committee. A competition has been opened to architects to see who will design the structure for the choir. This will close December 8, and work will be commenced as soon after then as possible.

The financial outlook is said to be very bright for the proposed national cathedral and the erection of various buildings with-in the close will be carried on. it is declared, from year to year.

He said he wanted a long term, and for that reason he had smashed the largest glass he could find. He said he had done a similar piece of work in New Orleans some months ago.

GUNNERS AFIELD.

Reports from the surrounding countles indicate a goodly supply of quail, and rab-bits have not been so plentiful in years. In Maryland non-residents are required to take out a license unless they be members of a shooting club organized last year.

Virginia permits non-residents to hunt when accompanied by land owners, pro-vided no fee is paid for the privilege. No game, however, is permitted to be shipped out of the state. But it is safe to say many hunters will brave the statutes and take a chance at being caught. Many launches and those of the sail boats still in commission went down the Potomac last night after ducks. Reports from Wide Water (ex-President Cleveland's favorite ducking place) and the numerous creeks on both sides the Potomac indicate large numbers of mallards,

THE RETIREMENT OF CLERKS.

Gen. Humphrey's Recommendations

Revive the Discussion. Quartermaster General Humphreys' recommedation, in the course of his annual report, favoring the establishing a departmental civil retirement system, has revived the discussion of that plan among the employes of the government. The Star has already received letters on the subject, the authors of which request that their names be not published. One of these writers

"I notice that the President advocates "The Simple Life" and speaks feelingly of the work done in that direction by Mr. Wm. F. Downey. And very properly, as is everything the President says. But in this connection I find a field for his own activity in the report of General Hum-phreys. The plan suggested will not cost the President or the government a cent, and will bring relief to many a weary toller who finds it otherwise impossible to save up for the inevitable day of retirement. Few know the many calls and many trials of a government clerk, who is supposed to have money to burn. Give them a chance to insure, by deducting a percentage from their salaries, and the United States will be saved from what has ecome a national disgrace."

Another writes thus: "I beg to invite the particular attention of the President, senators and representatives to the report of the quartermaster general. It seems inexplicable that Congress will not pass a law permitting the clerks themselves to provide for their old age beyond peradventure. As far as I know every civilized government but the United States pensions its employes, and yet the great republic will not pass a law providing for a system of deduction from their salaries to enable them to enjoy in peace a freer old age. This will redound to the benefit of the government by bring-ing new blood to its assistance. Moreover, ter of a century that better and more work would be done by the clerks working six heurs a day, three before lunch and three after, with an hour for lunch, when they could go home, than under the presen system, with a paltry half hour to swallow a bite in the fetid atmosphere of a crowded lunch room. The additional half hour has

DEAD MAN IDENTIFIED.

Victim of Railroad Accident at Ivy City the 9th Instant,

It has been ascertained that the man whose body was found between the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad near Ivy City the 9th of this month was Thomas Hughes. He was about forty years old, and had been employed as a laborer in the government printing office. He occupied a room in the house of Mrs. Mary Koontz, 514 13th street northwest. Mrs. Heath and Ralph Staocard, roomers in her house, identified the photograph and effects of the dead man. Hughes suffered from asthma, and had been in the habit of taking long walks in the country. It is thought that he was enjoying one of these walks when he was struck by a train and killed. The police took charge of his effects today, and the body may be transferred from potter's field to a local cemetery. About thirty years ago Hughes, who was then about ten years old, was taken from an orphan asylum by the mother of Mrs. Koontz, and he has since lived in the family.

EXPERT IN THIRKEY BAISING.

Man Who Supplies President's Bird

Every Thanksgiving Day. Down in the southern part of Rhode Island, It is stated in the Providence Telegram, there is a man who has probably done more businessin the turkey line than any other mandiving or dead. He is Horace Vose, and his name and fame as an expert on the turkey question is world-wide. Mr. Vose is a man with an individuality. Genial, kind anti with a prepossessing way, he has made a host of friends. He is better known, however, as the man who sends the Thanksgiving day turkey to the President of the United States. This has been a custom with Mr. Vose for more than thirty years. In 1822 Mr. Vose, who was at that the transition of the United States. that time in the turkey business, sent a huge turkey to President Grant. The same was duly received at the White House and a personal note of thanks came back to the donor. The bird weighed thirty-six pounds. Since that time each Thanksgiving has seen a specially fine turkey go from Mr. Vose's farm at Westerly to grace the table of the President in Washington. Sometimes he sends two, so that the chief executive may dine off the national bird, so to speak apologetically, at Christmas time, also. Mr. Vose began business when a young man and now, though over sixty-four years of age, he is still hale and a good business

Mr. Vose does not raise his turkeys him-self, but goes about in the early spring, as soon as the broods are hatched, buying up all the young birds he can find. Over these, while they are raised by their owners, he keeps a watchful eye. They are fed on corn and roam about the farms picking up what they may. Thus many so-called Rhode Island turkeys may be raised in the adjoining state of Connecticut. The President's turkey this year came from the farm of Mrs. C. N. Brown and was selected from a herd of eighty-eight birds. It weighed thirty-three pounds alive and about twenty-nine dressed. It was a fine specimen and no doubt the man with the strenuous appetite will do ample justice to this Rhode Island gobbler at dinner this evening.

EXCURSIONS.

Tourists from distant parts of the country and also transatlantic travelers invariably make it a point to visit Old Point Comfort when sojourning in this section of the country. Old Point furnishes much of interest, being a military and naval base and its surroundings are historic, but the Chamberlin, whose fame has reached all quarters of the civilized globe, is the great attraction for those tourists who are accustomed to the luxuries of travel. A comfortable and at the same time convenient means of transportation from this city to Old Point and Norfolk is afforded by the steamers of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company. These vessels make the trip in one night, sailing every day in the year at 6:30 p.m. Daily connections are made at Norfolk with trains for the southern winter resorts, and also with steamers for northern ports. The tourist sleeper coaches used in the Southern Pacific service to San Francisco provide all the essential comforts. Excursions to California are made three times week from this city, and through berths are obtainable at a small figure. Detailed information can be had at the office of A. J.
